

Reds Report Satellite Heading For Planet Venus

MOSCOW (AP) — With a new Sputnik as a launching pad, a 1.418-pound "automatic interplanetary station" was fired off Sunday on a flight toward a springtime rendezvous with the planet Venus, the Russians announced.

The probe into the mysterious depths of outer space was carried out successfully in an extraordinarily complicated manner, the announcement indicated.

It said a multistage rocket carried a new Sputnik into orbit, a rocket was launched from the Sputnik, and the rocket fired off the space station with the intention of hitting Venus or going into orbit around it.

On the station is a Soviet banner with the Soviet coat of arms. At noon, in Moscow, it was announced the new space probe already was more than 80,000 miles on its flight to Venus, whose distance from the earth varies from 26 million to 160 million miles.

Tass news agency said the interplanetary station was not expected to reach the planet—from which the Romans named their goddess of love—until mid-May.

Functions Normally
The announcement said equipment aboard, including radio transmission apparatus, was functioning normally and was being tracked by a special center.

"In conformity with the Soviet space research program, a heavy artificial satellite of the earth was launched from the Soviet Union on Feb. 12, 1961, by an improved multistage rocket," said the announcement.

"On the same day, a guided space rocket, launched from the Sputnik, set an automatic interplanetary station on a flight to the planet Venus."

The space probe was the second announced by the Soviet Union in eight days.
On Feb. 4, the U.S.S.R. announced the launching of a giant seven-ton Sputnik whose radio silence has mystified Western scientists.

The scientists were unable to get radio signals from it, but have been able to observe it briefly.

The Russians, who hailed the launching of the seven-ton Sputnik as a significant step toward manned space flight, have been strangely silent about its performance, leading to Western speculation that something went wrong.

The launching Sunday, was hailed as "blazing the first path to planets of the solar system."
Venus circles the sun at an average distance of about 67 million miles.

It is sometimes called the morning star, sometimes the evening star, and like the earth is enveloped in cloud-laden atmosphere.

Astronomers have been able to determine how long it takes to revolve on its axis.

The Russians said the main object of the probe is to check methods of putting a space body into interplanetary trajectory.
It also is designed to check radio communications over super-long distances and the guiding of a space station, to check more exactly the size of the solar system and to carry out a program of physical observations in outer space, it was announced.

The station is broadcasting on an ultrahigh frequency of 922.8 megacycles per second in order to penetrate the earth's ionosphere.

Guided From Earth
The Russians are aiming at Venus when it will be about 30 million miles from the earth. Venus comes nearer the earth than any other planet. Communications from that area would set a new record in space communication.

At present the mark is held by the United States. Pioneer V, launched last March from Cape Canaveral in a sun-circling orbit, lost contact at 22.5 million miles when its batteries failed.

The space station apparently can be guided from the earth by radio signals, as the announcement said it had "received commands from the earth."

(In Washington, Dr. Hugh Dryden, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said the United States is at least 1½ to 2 years from achieving the kind of piggy-back launching claimed by the Russians. President John F. Kennedy was informed of the Soviet announcement.)

(Western scientific observers speculated that the experiment eight days ago with the seven-ton satellite was for the purpose of testing the system of launching from a satellite. They pointed out an accurate orbit of a big satellite was necessary in order to know just when to separate the Venus rocket from its carrier.

Adds To Claim
(They suggested that this could be another step in the direction of putting a man into space. It adds to the Soviet Union's claimed accomplishments — including hitting the moon with a rocket, photographing the back side of the moon, and orbiting the sun.)

Prof. Boris Kukarkin, a Soviet scientist, was quoted as saying, "The day has come closer to the fulfillment of man's dream — to visit and investigate the planets."

He commented that this was the first time a satellite in orbit has fired a rocket into space. He said controls on rockets fired into the Pacific were such as to prove that rockets could be controlled in space.

For several months Soviet scientists have been talking about the possibility that a rocket to or near Venus might solve one of the great mysteries — whether there is life there.

Lumumba Search Stymied

Block U.N. Efforts To Investigate

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—U. N. headquarters said Katanga's President Moise Tshombe refused Sunday to see an Ethiopian general assigned to investigate the disappearance of ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba.

The investigator is Brig. Gen. Mengasha Hyassu, chief of staff of the U. N. Congo Command. He flew to Elisabethville, Katanga's capital, on the special request of U. N. Secretary — General Dag Hammarskjöld.

Hyassu's job is to try to find out exactly what happened to Lumumba and his fellow prisoners, Maurice Mpolo and Joseph Okito.

The Katanga government says the three overpowered guards holding them in a farmhouse at Mutshatsa, 220 miles west of Elisabethville, Thursday night and fled in a black Ford, subsequently found wrecked 45 miles to the north. It has denied rumors that the story of the escape was issued to cover an assassination plot.

"To my knowledge it was a genuine escape," Tshombe told newsmen in Elisabethville.

Internal Affairs
The Lumumba case is a purely internal affair that has nothing to do with the United Nations, he declared, and he is awaiting a full report from his own inquiry commission.

The United Nations disclosed that troops from three of the Congo's armies are on the move, perhaps to a deadly rendezvous.

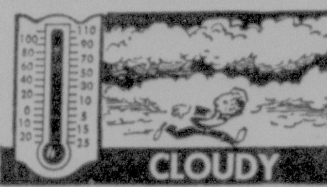

A force of 1,200 central government soldiers under Maj. Gen. Joseph Mobutu was reported arriving by plane and boat at Bumba, a Congo River town on the frontier of Lumumbist Oriental Province.

Meanwhile, truckloads of rebel troops headed westward from Stanleyville, Oriental's capital, toward Bumba. U. N. reports confirmed that there was a regular flow of troops to Basoko, a halfway point on the road to Bumba.

A U. N. spokesman said there are no U. N. troops in the vicinity. He reminded newsmen that the Security Council mandate will not permit the United Nations to interfere if war actually breaks out.

The third force on the move is Katanga's. A detachment of 1,200 men under tough European officers relieved the embattled Katanga garrison of Luena, a coal-mining center, and drove out entrenched Baluba warriors.

Worthwhile Tour

Goldberg Ends Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg returned Sunday night from a five-state inspection tour of unemployment areas with word that President Kennedy has found the mission "very worthwhile."

Goldberg said he put in a phone call to Kennedy before leaving Pittsburgh, Pa., last stop on his Middleburg, Va., country place, about 45 miles from Washington.

"The President told me he had followed the trip with great interest," the labor secretary said.

"He thought it was very worthwhile."

Goldberg said that in talking with idled workers and their families, with businessmen, labor leaders and community leaders he found widespread support for Kennedy's program aimed at restoring the nation to full production and employment.

Saying Kennedy is proposing both short-term and long-term economic uplift measures, Goldberg added: "We can, we must and we will deal with problems we saw on this trip."

The labor secretary said the country is suffering from an inherited recession, but he insisted again that the purpose of his tour, one of several he said he will make, was not political.

Before leaving Pittsburgh, the labor secretary appeared in a CBS-TV interview — "Washington Conversation."

"I think we have a better understanding now of the human problems reflected in the employment statistics," he said.

"I have found a broad basis of support on the part of all the people of the country for the President's proposals," he added.

At Pittsburgh, chief steel center in a state that has about one-tenth of all the nation's 5,385,000 unemployed, Goldberg again heard reports from unemployed workers and their families dependent on unemployment benefits or outright relief to keep alive.

Mrs. Joseph Charney told the labor secretary at a Pittsburgh labor union hall that neither she nor her husband can find work "and when you have four children they want to eat."

Powell Awaits Kennedy Action
NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., said Sunday he will withhold efforts to include a racial discrimination ban in education and housing bills in the hope President Kennedy will make such enactment unnecessary.

The New York Negro leader who is the new chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee said he feels chances for passage of school and housing bills will be enacted if the so-called Powell amendment is not included.

The two who began their terms Friday, three days ahead of schedule, are Westinghouse Electric Corp. Vice President John H. Chiles, 57, of Sharon, Pa., and Charles I. Maunell, 60, of suburban Drexel Hill, a Westinghouse sales manager.

The seven were among 44 executives of 29 companies fined a total of $1,924.50 for the conspiracy in the annual $2 billion electrical construction industry.

Animal Feeding Haven
PROMISED LAND — Although eating gravy out of a discarded automobile hubcap isn't something they learned to do at their mother's knee, the ten raccoons who do it in Promised Land seem to accept it as a normal and tasty pastime.

The raccoons are among the regular four-footed callers of the wild animal world — skunks, opossum, deer and foxes — who stand drooping at the back door of "Hileah" — the year-round home of Mr. and Mrs. Al Steltz.

No dinner gown is needed to signal mealtime. There's always somebody hungry coming (or, satisfied), going, in the yard bordering on the State Park.

Never a bit of "left-overs" is wasted in the Steltz home, where a container of bacon drippings, a bit of peanut butter, or a dab of gravy is saved for a famished furry friend.

Some unusual containers for food have been pressed into service. Empty cottage cheese boxes are ideal and can be wired to a tree branch. A discarded birthday cake disc holds a spread of peanut butter. Cardboard cartons yield alfalfa, corn and stale bread (a favorite, and over 100 pounds of bread are consumed each week). Regular feeders with suet and seed for birds are hung about the yard.

Feeding the hungry breadline started as a hobby with the Steltz, who came to Promised Land on weekends from their home in Allentown until 1957, when ill health forced them into retirement. They have made the healthful — if cold — Poconos, their permanent home since that time.

The hobby has developed into a fulltime — but interesting — job. Even before breakfast, the parade begins, and who can eat his own meal under the hopeful stare of a masked raccoon or a smiling skunk, without offering to share?

Once everybody is eating, the process continues all day. As many as 16 squirrels, ten raccoons, six foxes, twenty to thirty deer, and myriad birds appear daily for handouts.

Many different animals feed together. One time, four deer calmly devoured corn while two raccoons hunted between their feet for food.

Slow Progress
But sometimes, someone in the crowd spoils things, and a hawk is the "baddie" whose shadow often threatens the smaller animals. When the watchers at the Steltz picture window see squirrels flatten themselves out and freeze into furry "bark" on tree trunks, they know that the villain is near.

The family has watched the recovery of a deer from near-death caused by what they believe to be an imbedded arrowhead. The deer struggled to live for two years, making such slow progress that when it disappeared for several weeks at a time, they gave it up as dead. But it returned, and is growing stronger, and now joins in the breadline with just as much enthusiasm as the others.

The animals do their good turn, too. When the snow was so deep that she couldn't hang her washing out in the yard, Mrs. Steltz disappeared. But the morning after the snow stopped, so many pairs of animal feet and hooves had been busy that the snow was just out there washing with no trouble at all!

The deep snow doesn't stop the wild visitors. "They come bounding in like kangaroos," Mrs. Steltz laughs.

She has been defied by a gray fox who stood his ground and barked shrilly as she shook her duster outdoors. She has been welcomed by swarms of chickadees who sit on her head and shoulders and eat from her hands. And she has been silently thanked by a hundred satisfied animals who might have starved, but for her interest and generosity.

Report Says Lumumba Was Slain, Jan. 17

DURBAN, South Africa (AP)—The Sunday Tribune says proof is lacking, but the most favored story in Elisabethville is that Patrice Lumumba was slain the night of Jan. 17 when he arrived at that Katanga capital as a battered prisoner.

"The hunt for Congo ex-Premier Lumumba is officially still on," the Tribune said Sunday in an Elisabethville dispatch, "with spotter planes and helicopters scouring the area and roadblocks flung across all exit routes."

"But here in Elisabethville everyone smiles knowingly when the escape is mentioned. The most favored story says Lumumba, was shot the same night he was flown blindfolded into Elisabethville."

"The elaborate force of his imprisonment was maintained, the knowing ones say, so his body could be found officially just a few hours before the United Nations meets in New York to vote on whether all political prisoners in the Congo should be freed."

"President Moise Tshombe of Katanga, so the story goes, will refuse to say where Lumumba's body was found for fear of laying the tribesmen in that area open to reprisals later from pro-Lumumbists. All Tshombe will show, sources here maintain, will be photographs of the dead Lumumba and his coprisons. It is hinted that the bodies will bear marks of burning, but will nevertheless still be recognizable."

"However, it must be emphasized that nobody has any reliable information on whether Lumumba really escaped or whether it is all just a political fabrication."

The Katanga government has officially denied its announcement of the escape Friday was manufactured to cover up an assassination plot. It said Lumumba and two associates flown to Katanga by the central Congo government for safekeeping — Senate Vice President Joseph Okito and former Youth Minister Maurice Mpolo — escaped by car from a farmhouse prison. It hinted that U. N. Moroccan troops were involved.

Miss Monroe Visited By Ex-Husband
NEW YORK (AP) — Ailing screen star Marilyn Monroe was paid a hospital visit Sunday by Joe DiMaggio, onetime Yankee baseball great and one of her former husbands.

DiMaggio arrived for the visit at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center carrying a bouquet of flowers. Miss Monroe checked into the medical center last Friday for what a spokesman said was a "complete physical checkup."

Miss Monroe also was visited by drama coach Lee Strasberg and his wife.

DiMaggio and the Strasbergs have been Miss Monroe's only visitors since she checked into the center. She spent four days before that at the Payne-Whitney Psychiatric Clinic of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

DiMaggio was her second husband, whom she divorced to marry writer Arthur Miller. Miss Monroe divorced Miller recently.

"She went to the hospital for what amounted to exhaustion and nothing more," DiMaggio said.

"The girl has been working very hard with pictures she has done, and Clark Gable's death did not help matters," he added.

Miss Monroe had just completed "The Misfits" as costar with Gable when he died of a heart ailment.

Church officials told reporters the Red border police gave no specific reason for turning back the West German churchmen, but told them they were "unwanted in the East German Democratic Republic."

Informants said the East German police were acting on a "blacklist" of churchmen who had supported an agreement to provide Protestant chaplains for West Germany's armed forces. The Communists claim the agreement implied support for "West German revenge-seeking militarists" and thus made the Church "a tool of NATO."

Soviet's Piggy-Back Style Is Pioneer Of Space Age

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The Soviet Union's piggy-back satellite hurled toward Venus pioneered one of the future goals of the space age.

This is to build launching pads and refueling stations orbiting high above the earth.

Rockets taking off from such space stations already would have overcome much of the earth's tugging pull of gravity.

They would not have to spend loads of fuel rising up just to heights of 200 to 300 miles. All their fuel could be used for the long journey to other planets and distant reaches of space.

In a sense, the new Soviet satellite achieved this, judging from Soviet accounts. A huge satellite weighing perhaps seven tons was sent into orbit. From it, on automatic command, a smaller 1,800-pound satellite was launched to head toward Venus.

Sunday's shot could explain the mystery of the seven-ton Soviet satellite loomed 10 days ago. It was testing this system. A High Soviet official has said it was intended to check on how to put such a mammoth satellite into an accurate orbit.

The accurate orbit would be necessary in order to know just when to fire or separate the Venus probe carried up in piggy-back fashion.

When man travels into space, one objective will be to build floating space stations by sending up prefabricated materials aboard freighter rockets, with men then joining the pieces together to make living quarters and a rocket service station.

Venus, closer to the sun than the earth is, comes within 26 million miles of the earth when it is directly between the earth and sun, but it can be as far as 160 million miles away from the other side of the sun.

Moscow apparently hopes to maintain radio contact with her

Venus messenger until it comes close to that planet. The record distance for space communication is 22½ million miles, set by Pioneer V, a United States probe which is circling the sun. It maintained radio contact for that distance.

The Venus satellite seems large enough to be equipped with guidance controls and good instruments to measure radiation, magnetic fields, meteorite impacts and phenomena within the solar system.

State To Receive Shortway Bids

STATE Department of Highways will receive bids March 17, for section three of the Keystone Shortway, Legislative Route 1002, in Pocono Township, Rep. Van D. Yetter (D-Monroe) reported yesterday.

Rep. Yetter was advised of the action by Park Martin, state secretary of the highways.

The project will be 2.25 miles long and will consist of divided highway reinforced concrete pavement 24 feet wide on each side with an earthen median.

The median will be variable in width from 65 feet to 315 feet. The highway will include one reinforced concrete box (culvert), three pairs of bridges with alternate superstructure, one bridge with alternate superstructure and also several ramps.

Interstate 80
The Pocono Township section, which will extend west toward Crescent Lake and the Stroudsburgs to Bartonsville and Bartonsville to Tannersville sections are part of the Interstate Route 80, which will eventually extend from New York to San Francisco.

Interstate 80 crosses Pennsylvania from Delaware Water Gap to Sharon. In Monroe County, it is the eastern terminus of the Keystone Shortway and the sections west to Crescent Lake are part of the Penn-Can Highway linking Stroudsburg and Binghamton, N.Y., by way of Scranton.

Grandville, said the French had no right to demand that the Soviet plane identify itself when it was flying over the open sea. Gromyko's statement, as published Sunday, added sardonically, "Even if the crew of the French warplane did not have a single literate person who could read the markings (on the plane), could not the French fliers see a two-meter-large Soviet national flag on the plane?"

Gromyko acknowledged French plane opened fire on the president's plane, although the French declare the shots were signals and not fired at the plane. The Soviet plane was not hit.

Gromyko acknowledged French expressions of regret, but added that Soviet newspaper readers repeated his request that the French fliers be punished and warned that any attempt to "whitewash" acts "of international banditry" is a "risky undertaking."

De la Grandville told newsmen Saturday night the exchanges would continue. It is evident the Soviet Union is not prepared to drop the issue.

U.S. At Least 2 Yrs. From Pig-Back Shot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U. S. space agency official said Sunday the United States is at least 1½ to two years away from accomplishing the piggy-back space launching claimed by the Soviet Union.

Dr. Hugh Dryden, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, indicated he was not surprised when a reporter told him the Soviets claimed to have lobbed a heavy satellite into orbit and then had it automatically shoot another rocket bearing a 1,418-pound interplanetary space station on a pathway toward Venus.

"We have known for some time," Dryden said, "that they had the booster (rocket) capability for such a mission."

"And about all I can say now is that we will follow the developments with interest and will look forward to the Russians making the results of their experiments available to the world scientific community."

In reply to a question, he said the United States would try such a feat "when we have the booster capability."

"We are working hard," Dryden said, "on improving our booster capability. And, in our long-range planning, if all goes well, we would expect to attempt such a mission in another year and half to two years."

15 Persons In Locked House Die
BOMBAY, India (AP)—Fifteen persons were locked in a house and burned to death Friday in the grimest tragedy yet in bitter Hindu-Muslim feuding in Madhya Pradesh, State.

Unofficial figures show 47 persons have been killed in rioting and other violence near Jabalpur in the last eight days.

The latest incident occurred at the village of Sarupa. Twelve members of the band which locked the 15 in the house and burned it were arrested.

say whether those burned were Hindus or Moslems.

Religious feuding started in Jabalpur after the alleged rape of a Hindu girl by two Moslems. Police restored order in the town after arresting more than 500 persons and imposing a curfew.

President Was Advised Of Launching

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy was advised of the new Soviet rocket firing Saturday night and the United States has been tracking it ever since, it was announced Sunday.

This terse statement came from the White House about two hours after the Soviet Union announced it had fired a satellite into orbit and then launched from it "an automatic interplanetary station on a flight to the planet Venus."

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger declined comment on whether there were any plans to cooperate with the Russians in the Venus probe.

So far, each nation has gone its separate way in space research, although a limited amount of information has been exchanged.

Kennedy apparently was informed while spending a quiet weekend at an estate he is using as a retreat in Middleburg, Va., about 45 miles from Washington.

The Pentagon said it knew about the firing before the Soviet Union announced it.

A Defense Department spokesman would not say just how soon after the launching the military learned of the new Soviet space achievement.

Nor would he say whether the report came from intelligence sources or from tracking operations.

Dear Abby

Actions Speak Louder

Dear Abby: I met this girl last June and we fell in love, boom! Just like that. I am 22 and she is 17. Her mother likes me but her father hates me so bad I have to see this girl on the sneak. You see, I just spent 15 months in prison and her father can't forget it. I have never seen her father and he refuses to even meet me. He told his daughter if he ever caught her with me he would break her neck. Abby, I am really a swell guy. I am going straight. I want to marry this girl, but how can I when her father won't even let her go out with me? Please help me. Thanks a million.

GOING STRAIGHT
Dear Abby: Put yourself in her father's shoes. How would you like to have your 17-year-old daughter "in love" with a fellow just out of prison? He has nothing against you personally, but he doesn't like your record. Even now you are sneaking behind his back. I advise you to stay away from the girl until you have "gone straight" for a year and are able to show by your actions — not only words — that you are a "swell guy."

Dear Abby: You said in your column that it was all right for husbands to have a night out with the boys as long as the boys were boys. What about the wives? Don't you think while the boys are out we girls should hire sitters and also have a night out with the girls, as long as the girls are girls?

Democrats Change Place Of Meeting

BARRETT — Due to the closing of the Barrett Township Consolidated School today for Lincoln's Birthday, the regular scheduled meeting of the newly organized Barrett Democratic Men's Club will be held tonight at 8 at the home of Charles Vogt, Mountainhome.

On the agenda will be a reading of the by-laws for the consideration of the body, also the election of a slate of permanent officers will take place. As this is an important meeting a good attendance is anticipated.

It is expected that a member of the Barrett Township Supervisors Board will give a talk on municipal affairs. All male registered Democrats are invited to attend.

May Come To U.N.

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—President Janio Quadros says he is considering the possibility of heading Brazil's delegation to the March session of the U. N. General Assembly.

Dear "Girls": Better pick another night. You might run into the "boys."

Dear Abby: Five of us have been in a car pool for about two years. Four of us are in our late 20's and one lady is about 30. From the minute this older lady gets into the car, no matter who is talking, she interrupts and monopolizes the conversation. She does this all the time. No one has been able to finish a sentence in two years. Our question: Is there a polite way to tell this older woman to keep quiet so someone else can get a word in edgewise?

FRUSTRATED FOUR
Dear Abby: You are all adults, so rudeness should neither be tolerated nor excused because of "age." One of you should tell the offending party (Nicely) the consensus of her fellow passengers. If she doesn't get it — or doesn't like it — let her get another car pool.

Flood Plan For Creek Awaits OK

MONROE County Soil Conservation Directors voted to hold their first annual dinner April 13, Conversationalist, Norman Dietrick said last night.

The time and place for the dinner will be announced later, he said.

Dietrick also informed the directors that the work for the Upper Broadheads Creek flood control is now ready for approval and that a meeting with the Monroe and Pike County Commissioners will be announced for their consideration of the plan.

The plan will then go to the U. S. Congress for its approval. The directors welcomed A. W. Martin as a new director. Martin has been a long-time farmer in the Effort area, and has been secretary of Monroe County Co-op Dairy for many years.

The directors also voted to have a display at the West End Fair this year with all cooperating agencies displaying their particular field of conservation.

Light Snow Falls On Pocono Area

MONROE COUNTY escaped the brunt of a new storm, swirling in from the northwest, which dumped three to five inches of fresh snow on some Pennsylvania communities yesterday.

Starting here about 7 a.m., the storm dropped from a half inch to an inch of snow on the Poconos before it gave way to fair skies. Moderate temperatures prevailed most of the day.

Hardest hit were areas of Central Pennsylvania along the Susquehanna River Basin, where frequent heavy snows this season have caused concern about possible flooding later.

Northeastern areas had mostly heavy activity. An inch of new snow fell in Philadelphia with from one to two inches reported in its suburbs.

Pittsburgh reported one inch of new snow, Philadelphia five inches, and Bradford and Brookfield two inches.

Harrisburg, which is having its worst winter in 68 years, had three to four inches of new snow, leaving an accumulation of 17 inches on the ground.

Roads in the state's mid-section were left icy and hazardous by the latest snowfall.

The U.S. Weather Bureau at Harrisburg said another storm was expected to hit Pennsylvania Monday night. The weather man said it was too early to predict how much new snow might fall but said it probably "will be something like we got in the past 24 hours." But he added it might be more widespread.

Flood forecasts at the Harrisburg bureau reiterated there was no immediate danger from flooding but noted that several days of warm rain could create a serious situation along ice-clogged streams and rivers.

Long-range predictions call for continued below normal temperatures and above normal precipitation in the next several weeks in Pennsylvania.

Politics played no part in the entertainment by Prince Hara, billed as "The Thief of Baghdad" who succeeded in involving Bob Wright, Ike Miller, Rev. Wesley Crowther, Dave Nieson and Oscar Everitt in a series of slight-of-hand tricks which dispossessed them of wallets, watches, their shirt—and some composure.

Mervin Fontanella served as toastmaster. Parke Unangst, county chairman, introduced the guests: Register and Recorder Jeannette Batory, County Commissioner Stanley Rader, Judge Fred W. Davis, State Senator William Z. Scott, Woodrow Horn, Howard Everitt, and Poley McClintock, co-founder with Tom Waring of the Pennsylvanians.

A telegram was read from California from Fred Waring, Tommy Cullen and his orchestra provided the dinner music. Rev. Wesley Crowther, of Shawnee, pronounced the benediction. William Thomas was chairman of the dinner committee.

Wayne Countians In Famed Group Which President Lincoln Greeted

NEWFOUNDLAND — When

President Abraham Lincoln, on a day 100 years ago, inspected the ranks of the Third Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Corps, he addressed and welcomed, among others, Company B from Wayne County.

These were the men from the villages of the county who, although they hardly knew how to respond to commands of "right face" or "present arms," were to learn to know the face of Antietam and Menassas.

They were to receive the commendation of General Meade at Gaines Mill for their "cool valor" and were to leave more than 100 of their comrades at Fredericksburg among the dead and wounded.

Pittsburgh reported one inch of new snow, Philadelphia five inches, and Bradford and Brookfield two inches.

Gen. George Gordon Meade.

One of the regimental officers was Rev. William H. Leake, from this county, who served the regiment as chaplain.

The regiment engaged in various skirmishes, but did not suffer a casualty in battle until June 26, 1862, at Mechanicsville, sometimes known as Meadow Bridge, Va., when three men were wounded and two taken prisoner.

The number seems small, in view of the fact that the regiment met the advance attack in a series of battles known as the Seven Days Fight, in front of Richmond, alone on the first day holding in check more than three times its number under Generals Longstreet and Jackson.

Gen. George Gordon Meade.

Army of the Potomac against 70,000 of General Robert E. Lee's finest. In this engagement, the regiment including the Wayne Countians showed "perfect discipline, coolness and undaunted courage."

Their next engagement came two months later, with the August 28-30 Battle of Manassas. Eight men were killed, 24 wounded and 16 taken prisoner.

Sept. 16 and 17 saw the Wayne Countians in the bloody Battle of Antietam, Md., when 17 were killed and 31 wounded. The battle lasted 22 hours, with the soldiers fighting without food or rest in the blood-stained cornfields.

At Fredericksburg, Va., on Dec. 13, the regiment lost more men than at any other time during its history. Twenty-six were killed, 86 wounded, and five taken prisoner. But of the regiment's work was written, "the only redeeming feature of the battle was accomplished by your unit."

Only one major battle was fought by the local men in 1863: Glendale, Va. There were 14 killed, 50 wounded, and 27 taken prisoner.

In 1864, the Battle of Cloyd Mountain, Va., on May 9, with three dead and 31 wounded, and the Battle of New River Bridge the following day, with one dead and four wounded, were the major battles in which the Pennsylvania regiment sustained losses.

There were other battles to be fought without recorded casualties by the troops from this area: Dranesville, Charles City Cross Roads, Second Bull Run, Blackburg, Chantilly, South Mountain, Princeton, and Brushy Mountain.

It takes a lot of intestinal fortitude to vote one's convictions in the face of heavy pressures to do the opposite.

For that reason we commend State Sen. Z. H. Confair, Williamsport Republican, for the stand he took last week on behalf of the administration's highway improvement program.

As an original booster of the Keystone Shortway, his interest in providing modern and safe highways for the people of Pennsylvania goes back more than a quarter century.

And, as president of the Keystone Shortway Assn., a non-partisan organization, Sen. Confair has made it a point to make intensive and objective studies of the financial management and the operations of the Department of Highways.

He frequently has found himself in opposition to department policies and actions and has spoken out impatiently against them. "My criticism was honestly expressed," the senator told his colleagues, "and I have no disposition to withdraw any of it."

Just as forthright was his determination to support Gov. David Lawrence's request for a two-cent increase in the state gasoline tax. He based this support on his conviction that the ambitious road-building program mapped by Highways Secretary Park Martin will go far in attracting new industries to Pennsylvania, particularly the depressed areas.

In this he was joined by another Republican senator, Harold E. Flack of Wilkes-Barre, in the heart of the economically distressed coal-mining region. Their votes provided the margin needed to put the bill through the Senate.

Sen. Confair was under heavy political pressures in his home district and in Harrisburg to oppose the gas tax bill. These pressures reached the point where he was threatened with defeat at the next election if he persisted in his decision to support the tax. He was also under economic pressures from interests that opposed the bill.

But the senator stood by his guns and voted his convictions in the final showdown, an action we predict will win him the thanks of all Pennsylvanians when the vast network of federal interstate highways take clearer shape in the not-too-distant future.

Sen. Confair has displayed much vision by his actions. In a very Lincolnian manner he has risen above partisanship to vote for what he regards as the best interest of the people. That took intestinal fortitude.

A Job For Parents

Persident Kennedy struck a refreshing note at his news conference when the subject of juvenile delinquency was raised. He observed that there are areas—in housing, schools, health—in which governmental action can help create a more desirable atmosphere for children to grow up in. "But this is a matter," he said, "which goes to the responsibility of the private citizen. The Federal Government cannot protect the standards of young boys or girls—the parents have to do it, in the first place. We can only play a very supplemental role and a marginal role."

It is encouraging to hear Mr. Kennedy talk about the responsibility of the private citizen, as a private citizen. The mass shifting of formerly private burdens onto the public back in recent years has brought altogether too great a growth of private irresponsibility, and some of Mr. Kennedy's approaches to government have suggested an acceleration of this.

But more specifically, his remarks suggest a healthy attitude toward the delinquency problem itself, which by its personal nature is inextricably bound up with the home.

One of the things parents are for is to instill rigorous ethical standards in their offspring. And if the government tries to take over the job, it's an excuse for wold-be slackers among parents to abdicate their own responsibilities. Fighting delinquency is essentially a matter of building character, and this is the parent's job, not the President's.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Sectarian Education

William J. Ryan, Sr., of Brooklyn writes me:

"Mr. Sokolsky, many of us would appreciate an article or two by you on the question of public funds to aid private (sectarian) education."

Nothing in the Constitution says anything about the separation of Church and State. Not a word appears either in the body of the Constitution or in its Amendments which can be correctly construed as limiting education to a secular curriculum. The only reference to the subject is in the First Amendment which contains the clause:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; . . ."

The term, "an establishment of a religion," taken in its meaning when the Constitution was written, can only refer to an established church, namely, one that is recognized as official, say, such as the Anglican Church in Great Britain, the Roman Catholic Church in Brazil, Judaism in Israel.

The term has nothing to do with the free exercise of religion by citizens who may accept any church of their choice and change from one religion to another. Nor does it in any way forbid a state to establish a religion as the State of Massachusetts taxed its citizens to support the Congregational Church up to 1833.

In fact, it has generally been held that religion is a matter for each state and not for the Federal Government to deal with. Sunday-closing laws are therefore passed or not passed by State Legislatures not by Congress; released time for public school pupils to be educated in the religion of their forebears is a state not a national issue.

Had the Mormons not got into a controversy with the Federal Government over bigamy, Utah could have had a state religion. Religious institutions appeared at the very beginning of our history. The Episcopalians were here in 1607; the Roman Catholics in 1539; the Jews in 1654. The Congregationalists who became so important in New England appeared in America in 1620 and the Methodists in 1766.

The term separation of Church and State has gained excessive currency in recent years. Most of our early universities were established by religious groups, some to train their clergymen. Prior to the Revolutionary War, all the colleges and universities in America had been established by Protestant churches.

In 1791, a Catholic college was established in Georgetown, which is now part of Washington, D.C., by Archbishop John Carroll of Maryland. The right of religious denominations to establish their own universities has never been questioned since the Dartmouth College case in 1819, in which the Chief Justice, John Marshall, held that a charter given to a college could not be transformed by acts of the State Legislatures.

This decision has never been changed either by constitutional Amendments or legislative action. Chancellor James Kent said of this case:

" . . . did more than any other single act proceeding from the authority of the United States to throw an impregnable barrier around all rights and franchises derived from the grant of government, and to give solidity and inviolability to the literary, charitable, religious, and commercial institutions of our country."

Since then, however, some of the sectarian universities such as Columbia which was Episcopalian or Princeton which was Presbyterian have become secular institutions. However, the Roman Catholics have established a large number of universities such as Fordham, Notre Dame, Villanova, etc. etc. The Jews established Yeshiva University in New York.

All schools, colleges and universities, secular or denominational, are usually subsidized by both the state and Federal government from taxation. Without this exemption, these institutions could not exist.

Such large contributors to education as the various foundations usually do not discriminate against schools or colleges because of their religious or non-religious affiliations. This is the situation as it exists at this moment. The present assumption by Roman Catholics is that President Kennedy's school aid program will be entirely secular and already Cardinal Spellman has voiced a protest.

As, however, the program has not yet been presented to Congress in the form of an act of legislation, it is not final that the proposed school legislation against religious educational institutions. The proposed New York State legislation to give each student $200 is really a measure to help support denominational colleges without raising the issue of the separation of Church and State.

The Pennsylvania Story

Hits Method

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — A somewhat shaggy dog atmosphere prevails on Capitol Hill these days.

It isn't because the "shorning shears" have been lost, or anything quite so simple as that. Rather, it's a question of a series of quick snippets taken so fast, the dog simply looks shaggy!

We're referring of course to Pennsylvania's legislative brethren who this week are recovering from a rather withering tax welter — and now are heading into a second stage.

It is curious in a way perhaps that feelings in some quarters are running high on the saga of the gasoline tax increase which bounded through final legislative channels during the past week — and which Pennsylvania motorists will begin to pay as of April 1, with no April Fool!

It is a saga that is as interesting as it is indicative, and a portrait in a manner of speaking of Pennsylvania's "elected representatives."

We are concerned at the moment not so much with the gas tax increase itself of two cents a gallon — that is, whether right or wrong or whether it should or should not be — but more with the "symbolic trait" the gas tax incident blazed across legislative skies.

To begin with, there were few who actually questioned the need for the increased levy — the obvious facts being that if Pennsylvania is to evenly remotely adequately provide for its motoring public and scooter fans, more money would be needed for a necessarily expanded highway program.

The gas tax increase proposal was a Democratic Lawrence Administration baby — born in an era of quite obvious painful need. It had become a fetish, a petulant point with the Administration brood.

The administration already had suffered defeat on the gas tax increase proposal back in the 1959 session, a most nettling fact at the time and a big itch ever since. The need was present then but not to the degree by any stretch of the imagination as today.

Therein lies the one point where administration forces in their zeal overlooked the big issue; the critical point that unquestionably is destined to (shaggy) dog them for some time to come.

This year they went after the tax like zealous hounds that had already passed the fox, baying for speedy, quick and early passage — and this is the crux — before opposition could build up to cause possible defeat of the measure.

This year, curiously, they didn't need to worry over this possibility. There was already adequate support for the legislation — but in their overzealous itching, they seemingly couldn't see the woods for the trees!

The legislation now has the odiferous "ramrod" appellation attached to it, inescapably, unfortunately — and unnecessarily — for the Lawrence Administration.

The legislation was introduced Jan. 15 and three calendar weeks later had been blasted through both legislative houses. Or looking at it another way, it required less than a dozen legislative days to bump through the $74,000,000 tax increase.

From a strategic standpoint there wasn't a need for the rush, but even if there were and it might have meant defeat because of changing votes from public pressures, are lawmakers to abide by their own private wishes, preferences and feelings — or those of the people they were elected to serve in the first place?

The issue was not thoroughly aired. It was not given even remotely adequate public hearing and consideration. It was ramrodded from beginning to end — paradoxically, when it didn't need to be from an actual strategic standpoint!

The question now is whether the remainder of the administration's tax program is destined for the same ramrod treatment when scheduled to come up this week. If so, the shaggy dog atmosphere may well deepen!

Face Damage Suits

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — More than $80 million in damage and false claims suits is behind that terse announcement by Attorney General Kennedy that the government will seek redress from those electrical equipment companies convicted of anti-trust violations.

This new solar plexus blow will be based on the ground the government was over-charged for equipment for public power projects, transmissions lines, defense contracts and other supplies. These will be enumerated in each of the suits.

Foremost among the corporations slated to be on the receiving end of this new legal barrage are General Electric, Westinghouse, Allis-Chalmers, McGraw-Edison, and I-T-E, Circuit Breaker.

These multi-million dollar suits will be filed under a law enacted in 1935.

Sponsored, as an amendment to the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N.Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and a militant monopoly investigator, the statute authorizes the government to seek damages due to price fixing and other monopoly operations.

These cases will be the first brought under this five-year-old law. It has never been invoked before.

But now it is also going to be used against other industries. High on the list being considered by Justice Department trust-busters are drug manufacturers, whom Senator Estes Kefever (D., Tenn.) has been investigating for several years. He is planning further hearings on new charges against them.

These contemplated damage claims are based on the government's purchase of large quantities of drugs at reputedly secretly-fixed prices.

The total of these suits may run into tens of millions of dollars.

This is indicated in an Inner Department memorandum saying in part, "Also being studied is the possibility of bringing Section 4-A damage suits against a number of other anti-trust violators . . . Decision on that will be made in the near future."

Most of these cases were prepared by former Assistant Attorney General Robert Bicks, who headed the Anti-Trust Division and initiated the prosecution of the electrical equipment companies.

Bicks was offered a temporary reappointment by Attorney General Kennedy, but declined because he had accepted an offer from a large New York law firm.

Since President Kennedy and his staff took over there, telephone operations have increased three-fold. New lines are being put in, but the demand is still exceeding available facilities.

Said one harried White House operator, "On occasions there isn't a line open for either incoming or outgoing calls. Everybody is on the phone, including the President. In fact, he is one of the busiest phone users. He uses it at all hours of the day and night."

Golfing And Gifts — An estimated 7,500 gifts have been sent to President Kennedy and his family since his inauguration. They range from hand-knit booties for 2½-month-old John, Jr., to works of art and edibles of all kinds. The job of sorting the gifts is just being tackled, and no decision has yet been made on their disposition. Mrs. Kennedy favors distributing as many as possible to children's institutions, hospitals and charitable organizations . . . The President has decided to retain his predecessor's famous putting green on the White House grounds . . . But whether it will be used "depends on developments," according to aides.

Senate Changes — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., will give up the chairmanship of the Rules Committee later this session, after the hearings on the long-pending rules changes. Mansfield is telling colleagues he is too busy as Majority Leader and as a member of the Foreign Relations Committee to head the Rules Committee. Slated to succeed him is Senator Everett Jordan, N.C., who has been in the Senate only since April 1958. Jordan's winning this important chairmanship is a big feather in his cap.

Sen. Maurine Neuberger (D., Ore.) was warmly lauded by an unexpected source. When Senator Mansfield complimented her "skill and efficiency in presiding over the Senate," Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen, Ill., heartily echoed this praise. Said Dirksen, "I enthusiastically concur in those sentiments. And I want to add that in addition to the distinguished way in which the able junior Senator from Oregon presides over the Senate, she fairly suffuses this chamber with her charm and removes some of the exchanges the securities and aspersions which sometimes mark our deliberations."

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

If there were any Democrats around the Penn-Stroud Hotel on Saturday night they must have wondered how come they ever won the election: there were so many Republicans out for the Lincoln Day dinner, and all of them looking so extra gala—particularly the women.

It was the most dressed-up night since New Year's—partly because it was a sort of two-layer party with many of the guests also going to the Metzgar's party upstairs at the same time, mixing, mingling and drifting back and forth.

There's nothing very gala men in Monroe County can wear since local custom frowns on dinner jackets; though I can't see why. They don't cost as much as a cocktail dress, they'd save the wear and tear on his "other" suit, and they do make a man look debonair.

This year there wasn't Tom Waring with one of his fabulous ties to brighten the male sartorial scene. Tom was very much there, though, in the minds and hearts of the guests, and that telegram from former President Eisenhower is going to be given to the Waring family, as well it might.

Of course there was one unusual style note: Ike Miller without his shirt when the magician finished with him, and Bob Wright trying to protect his necktie by putting it in his pocket. But the star of the show was Oscar Everett from Effort and even yesterday guests were getting the giggles just thinking about his struggles with the magic words and the hole in that handkerchief, all with the most perfectly serious expression.

In fact, thinking back over the party I'm not sure that the Republicans, especially Congressman Jimmy Van Zandt, really believe they did lose the election. Certainly with all the scuttle butt about "the next governor and his wife" they aren't planning on losing the next one.

Garden Club Hurrying Into Spring

Forced shrubs, dish gardens and house plants will hurry Spring along in the arrangements to be exhibited by members of the Monroe County Garden Club at their meeting on Thursday afternoon at 2:15 at the YMCA.

Mrs. Horace Westbrook of the Daily Record will speak on her trip to Europe last summer, with Mrs. Ruth Brown also of the Record, illustrating the talk with pictures she took during their trip to England, France, over the Alps and in Italy.

Mrs. Edgar Van Why, president has asked members to bring candle stubs for the candle project of the club. Mrs. J. Harold Lanterman and Mrs. William Spangler are co-chairmen of the hostess committee.

The children cut out silhouettes of the bust of Lincoln and mounted them on plaques.

A popular feature of the party was a log cabin constructed of cookies and chocolate eclairs which vanished without a trace during the refreshment time.

Tomorrow is the fourteenth of February—a very important day to every woman and child. Even if a woman's head tells her it's a rather silly day, and it doesn't actually mean a thing if her husband of a week . . . a month . . . one year or fifty . . . doesn't remember her with a greeting or a gift, her heart tells her she's fluffing. Of course, that persistent hint of hers insists, Valentine's ARE important . . . if only because they prove someone was thinking of you, however fleetingly. Even though she might not ordinarily give a hoot about a sentimental card or a box of candy, they loom very large in her eyes when the woman next door, her closest friend or her best-loved enemy, croon, "Did you see what George gave me for Valentine's Day? What did Howard (or Judd, or Oscar, or Eddie) give you?"

If a woman is married to a thoughtless or forgetful man, she hasn't much choice in such a situation except to fib a bit. "Bless him," she can croon, "he gave me the most beautiful poem—something very personal he wrote himself. And flowers—but the poem is really more important." Or she may, if she can carry things off with an air, say, "Really, Isabelle, Horace and I don't pay any attention to such celebrations—he's saving to buy something really grand for our anniversary."

It's always a bit risky for a woman to fib about a Valentine gift. If she says, Elwood sent her flowers, she might be trapped by a friend dropping in to see them—in which case she must hastily explain that she doesn't care for flowers in the house and took them over to Aunt Clara, in the hospital. If she has really gone out a limb and said her gift was something like jewelry, she can explain it was so valuable she put it in a safety deposit box. But who would believe her? A much safer bet would be to say, "George is a practical husband—he knew I needed a girdle." After all, even a nosy friend can't expect to see THAT.

I once knew a woman who always bought herself a Valentine, and, if her husband didn't come up with something better, she insisted he reimburse her for her purchase. Oddly enough, while she put great stock in a Valentine, she never bought one for him. Her trick was to wait and see whether or not he remembered her. If he did, she'd grab one of the Valentines the children brought from school, erase the signature, and tuck it under his dinner napkin signed, "Guess Who?" She didn't regard this as cheating. She called it being thrifty . . . but she thought it wonderful if her husband, on such occasions, had been wildly extravagant. I am a woman . . . but there are times when I think every woman (except myself) is impossible to understand!

The happiest Valentine Days of my life (and yours too, perhaps) were those when I was a grade school student, making pathetically askew hearts with crude letters for Mother and Dad, and spending hours pasting lace paper frills on fancy cutouts for every one else in the class. I guess I must have been very unsure of myself, for I always sent one to myself signed "Guess Who?" just in case no one else remembered me.

What treasures they were, these penny Valentines—and what a thrill to occasionally receive a NICKEL one from someone who really regarded you as special. Like the little girl in McCall's who reported receiving ten "I Love You's," nineteen "Sealed With a Kiss," several anonymous and two "Drop Deads." I was in my glory on February 14th. Years later, for the children I had a yearly Valentine box, all decorated, at home with a gift for everyone . . . a custom we've decided to revive this year on a very modest scale.

In any case, tomorrow's the day. I hope it will be a thrilling one for you. If there's anyone you've overlooked who rates a special greeting, hurry to Wyckoff's and select something special. We've all kinds of gift suggestions . . . but the cards are going fast!

Ford To Give Fuel Refunds For Tractors

IN A SHARE-the-operating-cost-plan announced today by Ford Motor Company's Tractor and Implement Division, all buyers of new diesel-powered Ford and Fordson tractors will receive from their dealers one-half of the cost of their fuel purchases for the first 400 hours, or six months, of tractor use. The announcement was made on behalf of Ford tractor dealers by L. E. Dearborn, general sales manager, at the Division's headquarters in Birmingham, Michigan. He said the dealers' offer is retroactive on tractors bought since January 1, 1961, and will remain in effect until March 31, 1961.

"The tractor market is notoriously seasonal, and many farmers, according to Raymond Price, Inc., of Cresco, local Ford tractor dealer, hold back their purchases until just before the weather breaks in the spring. We believe a change in this traditional pattern can be accomplished by this incentive. In effect, this program will save farmers the cost of their fuel for 200 hours during their period of heaviest tractor use," he said. "We expect also that many new Ford owners will prove to themselves and to their neighbors the outstanding operating economy of diesel tractors," he added.

They will be required to keep records on their fuel purchases during the first six months or 400 hours of tractor use, whichever occurs first. The refunds of one-half of the fuel cost will be made by the dealer from whom they bought their tractors immediately upon presentation of these records at the end of the period.

Price said that Ford diesel tractors, first introduced in 1958, have increased steadily in popularity and now account for about one-third of all Ford tractors sold. The Fordson tractors, made by Ford Motor Com-

ALSCO RIGID BAK-R-FOAM siding employs 3 different layers of insulating materials. The workman above is insulating and applying siding both at the same time. Aluminum siding itself rapidly dissipates heat, the backing of foamed polystyrene with heavy aluminum foil bonded to the back side, completes this new aluminum siding product. Fuel savings (according to local dealers Zahorik and Roberts, 800 Sarah St., Stroudsburg), run as high as 35 per cent.

New Aluminum Siding Offers Many Advantages

HOMEOWNERS and those shopping for a new home are now being wooed by the aluminum industry with an interesting new siding, aluminum backed with foamed polystyrene. According to Zahorik and Roberts, local Alasco Aluminum Products dealers, researchers at universities and a commercial laboratory claim that the siding offers economy, durability, convenience and safety.

Core of the new siding is an aluminum panel of sufficient thickness to have a 20,000 pound tensile strength. The metal has a chemical coating on both sides, finish coatings over the chemical coats, and a backing of polystyrene foam, three-eighths of an inch thick. Attached to the foam is a sheet of heavy aluminum foil.

Zahorik and Roberts point out that freedom from painting is one of the attractions of the new eight-inch deep panels, which comes in both white and pastel colors. Alasco Aluminum, a leading manufacturer of aluminum siding, reports that architects prefer pastel shades for Ranch style homes and for homes in warm climates. Elsewhere, and especially for Dutch Colonial or Traditional homes, pure white siding is preferred.

Through aluminum transmits heat rapidly, the foam backing makes aluminum siding an excellent insulator. Scientists at Pennsylvania State University, and at the University of Akron, found that a siding branded Rigid Bak-R-Foam was better insulator than stucco, brick or even wood. The foam backing of this aluminum siding was found to have over 300 entrapped bubbles of air in each square inch.

Another side of the siding story is safety. There are two kinds. First, the home fire hazard is minimized, for the siding support combustion. Second, is economic safety. Because Aluminum siding requires neither painting nor special care to prevent depreciation, aluminum sided homes are especially safe risks for banks and for savings and loan associations.

A quick wash with a garden hose is all the maintenance that aluminum siding requires. Stubborn specks of dirt are removed with plain soap or a mild detergent.

Interesting, the siding is uninteresting to insects. Even in humid climates, according to a report by the Alasco Research Laboratory, aluminum siding does not require a termite check. Salt air is not a problem either. Thanks to the chemical coating, even the saltiest air is said by the laboratory to have no corrosive effect.

For more information on Alasco Rigid Bak-R-Foam siding, contact Allen Zahorik at HA 1-4472 or Elwood Roberts at HA 1-1145. They'll be happy to tell you more about applying this wonder siding to your building.

Here's How Little Kitchen Can Be Big

THE smaller the kitchen, the harder it is to cook and clean up after meals. A portable electric dishwasher can help solve both these problems.

The top of the dishwasher, which in some models is a chopping block, serves as counter space for food preparation — a welcome addition to small kitchens. Clutter is avoided by putting bowls, pots, pans, and utensils in the dishwasher before serving the meal, and adding dishes, glasses and silver immediately after.

New portable dishwashers roll easily to the sink, where the hose is quickly attached to the hot water faucet. After thorough washing and rinsing, dishes are hot-air dried, ready to be put away or left out of sight in the dishwasher. The dishwasher itself can be rolled out of the way until the next meal.

Doug Posts 62

Sanders, Palmer Deadlock For Phoenix Open Title

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Doug Sanders, shooting a course record 62, and Arnold Palmer, struggling through the final round for an even par 70, tied at the end of the regulation 72 holes in the $30,000 Phoenix Golf Open Sunday.

They will meet Monday in a 18-hole playoff for first prize money.

The 27-year-old Sanders, playing out of Ojai, Calif., started the day 8 strokes behind the leading Palmer, but fired 8 birdies and 10 pars in a near perfect round of golf.

Waited Nervously

He came in four holes ahead of Palmer, the only one with a chance to tie or beat him and waited nervously as the 1960 leading money winner scrambled home.

Palmer came up to the 18th hole needing a birdie to tie.

His second shot was in the fringe to the left of the green, 50 feet from the cup. He took his putter and rolled the ball too strongly eight feet past the hole, but sank his putt coming back.

Defending champion Jack Fleck, who beat Bill Collins in a playoff last year, came in third at 271 after a 1-under-par 69 Sunday.

Palmer went into the final round with a two-stroke lead over Fleck, and Sanders was so far back no one considered him a contender for top spot.

But it was a case of Palmer's fighting tree, trap and bush trouble while Sanders was shooting what he called unquestionably the finest golf of his life.

Sanders whose drives missed the fairway once Sunday and only twice in all 72 holes, chopped five strokes off par on the tough first nine with a brilliant 29. He knocked off three more coming in and just missed an eagle 3 on the 18th when his 45-foot putt pulled up an inch and a half short of the cup.

Not Misses

Hitting every green in regulation, Sanders had birdie putts of 10 feet at the second hole, 4 1/2 at the third, 15 at the sixth, one at the 18th, 15 at the ninth, six at the 14th, 35 at the 15th and his tapin on 18. He parred the other holes.

The only time he failed to hit the fairway this afternoon was on the 430-yard par-4 sixth. His ball landed in the rough, leaving him a low shot under the trees to reach the green.

His scraped six-iron poke, which he later described as "the greatest shot of my life," went to within 15 feet of the hole. He sank the putt for a birdie.

Scores

Monti Wins Sled Title From U.S.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Eugenio Monti of Italy, rocketing so fast his sled smashed into a tree beyond the finish line, won his fifth straight World Two-Man Bobsled championship Sunday with a record-shattering performance.

Gary Sheffield, a U.S. Marine from Lake Placid, finished a surprising second in the two-day, four-heat competition down the icy, mile Olympic run. The other American sled, driven by Bill Dodge of New York, was seventh.

Hardly Touched

Monti's sled hardly touched the run in the fourth and final heat as he and brakeman Sergio Sirpaeas flashed down in one minute, 9.22 seconds — fastest official mark ever for a two-man sled. The sled was moving so fast that Sirpaeas was unable to slow it during the 150-yard "braking area" beyond the finish. The sled smashed into a tree and Monti was cut slightly around the nose.

His cumulative time for four heats, 4:42.67, also was a record, well under the old mark of 4:52.83 set by American Stan Benham in 1957.

Sheffield did 4:45.74 and the crowd of nearly 6,000 cheered him all the way down on his final run as he sought to end Monti's bobsled domination. But his 1:01.41, good as it was, could not match Monti's final performance.

Gonzaga 79-77

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A basket by Seattle University's Tom Shaules in the dying moments of a basketball game Sunday gave Seattle a 79-77 victory over Gonzaga University.

Shaules' field goal came shortly after Gonzaga's Frank Burgess had tied the game about 40 seconds from the final buzzer.

Shaules, Eddie Miles and Dave Mills scored 23 points each for Seattle.

Burgess scored 30 points, 17 of them in the last 20 minutes of play.

Burgess has scored 716 points in 22 games this season for a 32.55 average.

Tough Road Trip Opens For ESSC

FOUR OF the toughest road assignments East Stroudsburg State College has faced this year, are in front of the Warriors in the next eight days.

The Warriors start their trial by ordeal tonight at King's College, Wilkes-Barre, a team that has won six of its last seven starts.

King's went on its winning binge after its All-East performer Mike Kwak began taking vitamin shots. Kwak is the 12th leading scorer in the country for small colleges, with a 27.4 mark and he is averaging 20 rebounds a game, which puts him in the nation's top 10 in that category.

East Stroudsburg moves back into Pennsylvania State College Conference competition Wednesday at Mansfield.

Mansfield, one of three unbeaten teams in the country, leads the Eastern Division of the PSCC. If East Stroudsburg hopes to challenge for the title, it will have to knock off the Mountaineers.

Mansfield beat Bloomsburg, the Warrior's Saturday night opponent, 72-71 Saturday. It was the first time that Mansfield had defeated the Huskies at Bloomsburg.

A week from Wednesday, the Warriors are at West Chester. Both West Chester and Bloomsburg have beaten East Stroudsburg.

Tonight's meeting with King's will be the second of the season for the Warriors. On Dec. 8, East Stroudsburg beat the Monarchs 82-80.

Kwak, a senior, who has scored 945 points in his college career, scored only 20 points against East Stroudsburg in their first meeting but that was before the vitamin shots.

King's and Kwak as the records show, have vastly improved since they met the Warriors last and in addition the Monarchs have been strengthened by the return of 6-3 Tom Kenefake.

Kenefake, a former Syracuse High School standout, lettered for King's last season but passed up the first semester of this season to concentrate on his studies. Tonight will be his first outing this season.

HIGH AND WET—Three East Stroudsburg State College record breaking or tying swimmers and Warrior coach Frank Grimm, rest on the high diving board after ESSC knocked off previously unbeaten LIU. From left — Rick Lobs, John Jacobi, Dick Wolslayer and Grimm.

Beat LIU 57-38

Warrior Swimmers Near One Of Best Records

EAST Stroudsburg State College's swimming team is only two meets away from its best record since shortly before World War II.

Saturday the Warriors knocked off previously unbeaten LIU, 57-38 for its sixth straight win. West Chester is the only team to hold a decision over East Stroudsburg this year.

In whipping the New Yorkers, coach Frank Grimm's aquanauts added three names to the record books.

Freshman Rick Lobs broke the school individual medley record for the third straight time. Lobs, the only Warrior double-winner in the meet, was clocked in 2:26.5. Last week he had a 2:27.3 time.

East Stroudsburg High School graduate Dick Wolslayer tied the school mark of 24.4 in winning the 50-yard freestyle. Warrior freshman Dennis Pistoli is the co-holder of the mark. Pistoli, who set the record against LaSalle in beating Wolslayer, did not swim Saturday.

He was serving as best man in a wedding.

The most brilliant record breaking performance was by sophomore John Jacobi.

Jacobi, who has won six of seven diving events this year, scored 228.5 points in the low-board competition. Dick Black held the former mark, 220, set in 1958.

Jacobi thrilled the capacity crowd with his near flawless performance. His point total was announced as a national record but Grimm said later that it was not.

Not National Record

"The system of judging diving competitions is so varied," said Grimm, "that it would be hard to determine a national record."

Grimm did say that it was the highest score that he had seen recorded in a dual meet.

LIU, which led decisions over such big name schools as Holy Cross and Seton Hall, forfeited the opening event, the medley-relay. LIU passed up the event to save its swimmers.

The Warriors loafed through the event in 6:11.6 missing the world's record by only about three minutes.

Wolslayer, who was beaten in the 100-yard freestyle by Pan-American games champion Fred Munch, posted the Warriors second win in the 50-yard freestyle, after LIU captured the 200-yard freestyle.

Munch Excels

Then Lobs turned in his record-breaking feat and Jacobi followed suit. But Munch, won three of the next four events, the 200-yard butterfly, 100-yard freestyle and 400-yard freestyle, to put LIU back into contention.

In between Munch's one-man act, East Stroudsburg's Steve Roethke won the 200-yard backstroke.

The Warriors still needed a win on one of the last two events to capture the meet. Lobs won the 200-yard breaststroke going away to clinch the decision and the Warrior freestyle relay team won by three quarters of a pool-length to widen the victory margin.

The Warriors faced Brooklyn Poly Saturday in New York and their regular season March 4 at powerful Adelphi.

They came by train from Paris and will leave Wednesday—the day Lent starts and carnival ends—for a skiing holiday in St. Moritz, Switzerland.

PP&L Opens Probe On Bid-Rigging

THE PENNSYLVANIA Power and Light Co. has begun an investigation to determine whether it will seek damages from the major electrical equipment manufacturers convicted of bid-rigging.

Jack K. Bushy, PP&L president said a study has shown PP&L purchased a maximum of $20 million worth of equipment covered by the guilty and no contest pleas of the manufacturers during the conspiracy period.

The U. S. Justice Department said at the same time it expects to file a series of suits to recover sums which the federal government estimates it lost as a result of identical bid practice alleged to have extended over the last six years.

Giant Action

The National Institute of Municipal Law Officers also reported it is setting in motion a giant consolidated damage action on behalf of city governments victimized by the fixed bids.

The 29 involved manufacturers were fined this week a total of $1,787,000 for price-fixing during the years 1955-1959.

PP&L president Bushy noted his company has about a year under the statute of limitations in which to decide whether it will bring suit. He said this would be adequate time.

Meanwhile solicitors of Allentown and Bethlehem said they are doubtful that their municipalities are involved in the complaints. Easton Mayor Dr. George Smith said his city's officials haven't checked into the matter but will do so.

You CAN Get Better Grades -- XI

Be A 'Neatnick' With Figures

By Leslie J. Nason, Ed. D., with Harry Karns

Neatness and orderliness can help you make better grades in arithmetic and mathematics.

Unhappy, many students neglect these simple rules because no one has explained how important they are.

Let's face it. Modern education many times neglects the individual student. This is not necessarily the fault of the schools. It is a consequence of an exploding school-age population and shortages of teachers and classrooms.

Teaching techniques are designed for classes of 35, 40, 50 students. Potentially good students get into bad habits and are not exposed to good habits. Training in neatness is drastically curtailed by punch-card tests made for rapid grading. All tests cannot be of this type, however, and when the student faces new situations, he is in trouble. Good scholarship becomes impossible.

Describes U. S. Mobility

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The Nationalist Chinese chief of staff, fresh from a visit to Okinawa, said Sunday U. S. forces there could rush to Formosa within five hours if needed.

Gen. Peng Meng-chi watched an American fire power demonstration before returning from Okinawa Saturday. He described the U. S. units as highly mobile, powerfully equipped and of top combat capability.

Recently on grade card day, a father brought his 10-year-old to us.

Jimmy's card bore a hard and uncompromising NEEDS TO IMPROVE behind arithmetic. Translated to the less compromising language of 20 years ago, the grade was F — standing for Failure.

The boy seemed bright enough. We decided to experiment. We wrote out some columns of addition, some subtraction, and some multiplication. He worked the problems rapidly and faultlessly!

We asked Jimmy to return the next day and bring some of his arithmetic papers with him. He did, and the source of the trouble was immediately apparent — so obvious that you would wonder why the teacher or the parent hadn't seen it.

Jimmy, who understood the intricate processes of arithmetic perfectly, had never learned to copy numbers down in straight columns. He had been applying the right principles to the wrong numbers because of a purely physical mistake!

"What does your teacher say about your papers?" we asked.

"She says they're wrong."

"We're afraid we would have to give that teacher a B — for Blindness. Or maybe that is unfair. Poor lady — perhaps she didn't have the time to say more."

Two Easy Systems

After learning to be neat and orderly, Jimmy started turning our perfect papers in school.

We simply cannot stress too strongly the importance of details. A small error, a small omission can destroy completely the effect of a large amount of otherwise flawless work.

You should do these things as of very complicated problems — without a single complicated move on your part.

Superior and gifted students too often are able to solve simple problems without the use of these techniques. They are shocked when their grades suddenly drop from "A's" to "C's" or lower when they reach college-level math courses. Ironically, their brightness is a curse to them until they discover or are shown the simple learning processes which will permit them to do the work of which they are capable.

Millions of boys and girls in public schools and colleges do not know how to solve problems. They are the sad victims of an age that knows how to measure one 100,000th of an inch but neglects to tell boys and girls how to arrange numbers in a neat and orderly column.

But now you know a secret that can help you avoid the pitfalls which await the careless and unwary.

In the next chapter we are going to tell you some more secrets that will help you on examination day.

(TOMORROW: How to prepare for examinations.)
